Father : Oh, no! I thought a rice omelet would be easy to make. But this looks ... strange.

Lisa : Oh, Dad. Don't worry about it. I can eat that.

Father : No, no. I want it to be perfect. Let me try again... What? I can't get the eggs out of the frying pan.

Lisa : Did you put some oil in it?

Father : Uhh, no... (Sound of a truck)

Lisa : Dad! The [※]garbage truck is here.

Father : What?!

Lisa : If we don't hurry, the truck will go.

Father : All right, then... Uhh...

Lisa : Dad, wait. That has paper in it. That's the [※]burnable garbage. They're not collecting that today.

Father : We did it! Let's go home.

Lisa : Dad, your shoes! One is black, and the other is blue!

Father : I hurried very much.

Lisa : Oh! I just remembered. We have P.E. class today. Did you wash my gym clothes?

Father : It's today?

Lisa : Well, thanks. We're home. Hey, Dad, do you smell something?

次の英文を読み、各問に答えなさい。

The ^{}octopus may look strange with its eight legs and small body, but in fact, it is one of the smartest animals in the world. Interestingly, the octopus is an animal that does not have a ^{}backbone. We know of many smart animals with backbones, such as dogs or cats, but the octopus is the only animal (A) a backbone that is so smart.

Octopuses can learn from the information they get, and then use it in new ways. For example, they sometimes climb inside fishing boats and hide in tanks full of ^{}crabs, one of their favorite foods. They have also learned how to steal fish from ^{}traps.

One well-known example happened about 100 years ago at an ^{*}aquarium in England. An octopus came out of its tank (B) night, climbed into another tank nearby, ate the fish that was in the tank, and then moved back into its own tank. This happened several times before the aquarium workers discovered what was happening. In another well-known story, Inky, an octopus in New Zealand, got out of his tank, went down a pipe, and found his way back to the (C)!

There is one more thing that octopuses are able to do. In one study, scientists wanted to know if two octopuses would (D) together in the same way that dogs or cats do. They put an empty bottle into an octopus tank, and soon the two octopuses were shooting water at the bottle. They pushed the bottle backwards and forwards (E) them just like two kids enjoying a ball game. This shows that octopuses can use the things around them for reasons other than ^{*}survival.

You must be { ① to ② smart animals ③ that ④ octopuses ⑤ surprised ⑥ find out ⑦ are } in so many ways.

[注] octopus タコ backbone 背骨 crab カニ
 trap 仕掛け網 aquarium 水族館 survival 生存

次の英文を読み、各問の（ ）内に入る最も適切なものを1つずつ選び、番号をマークしなさい。

Every year, in almost every country in the world, people die in car accidents. In 2016, about 1.35 million people in the world died because of car accidents. That means one person every 25 seconds dies because of them. How can we find an answer to this problem? Many people think that the answer will be computer-controlled self-driving cars.

In the United States, 81% of road deaths are caused by humans making mistakes. But self-driving cars don't make mistakes. They are not careless, they don't get tired, and they never need to stop. They always follow the rules of the road, and they decide what to do much faster than even the best human driver. These computer-controlled cars can talk to the Internet and talk with other cars around them in real-time, so they always know where they are and how long it will take to arrive at the place they are going to.

However, self-driving cars are not yet perfect. For example, tests show that the cars sometimes have trouble in the dark or in bad weather. When we humans are faced with an unexpected situation, we can usually think of something to do. On the other hand, self-driving cars are not good at deciding what to do in an unexpected situation.

Self-driving technology is getting better and better every day. People now believe that in a few more years most cars on the road will be self-driving. Soon after that, all cars will be self-driving. At that point, driving will become something to be enjoyed only on special roads, just as horse riding is today.
